There is apparently a market for any kind of book published. This week I read an advertisement about one on military cooking, and the ad said it contained "the secrets of military chefs!" Now I ain't too fussy about just how something is cooked; I have eaten with every branch of the military, have a stomach of cast iron . . . but I don't need the secrets of military chefs. I have seen more than one military cook take a prime steak and make good shoe leather from it; it takes a stomach of cast iron to drink some of the coffee made on field maneuvers, and some of their pancakes - well, they are heavy. Admittedly, ye ole editor weighed more after serving a couple of years in the Army than when I entered, but that was from stealing the cook's real cream to pour over my cereal.

The county lawyers have made their opinions on the courthouse situation official by appearing before the county commissioners with a proposal. They contend we should build a new courthouse in Enterprise and remodel the Elba courthouse, and propose a bond issue to finance the business. Now the bond issue needs a vote of the people, and therefore a vote on the bond issue would find out if the county citizens approve or disapprove of the lawyers' idea. If we go to the one courthouse (either in Elba or Enterprise) and close down the other, the next smart politician would get elected by promising a courthouse branch for the other side of the county. Therefore, I think maybe we should vote on this issue or SOMETHING.

Some folks get insulted when they hear me preaching "Shop At Home," but that is alright 'cause I would rather insult a few than see one family shop in the big city because they thought they were not wanted at home or because they hadn't thought about it. Money spent at home stays at home, and the taxes paid help the local governments and not the government of the big city. Some private citizens made a survey here recently, and discovered that if all local citizens spent their money locally, the increased income, taxes, etc., would solve the problems of our schools, recreation and just about every facet of our government needs! Do your part.

We haven't heard anything lately on the proposed shopping center for Elba. I guess that when anything develops pro or con, we will again begin to hear some news.

The stories coming out of Jonestown, Guyana, continue to shatter our thinking. Now I read of the three children getting their throats cut, possibly by their own mother, while someone held them by their hair. It scares me to spend much time thinking about such actions, but then we can't just ignore them and have them go away.

The high school football season is over, and for the first time in many years, South Alabama teams have swept all 4 crowns. Sweet Water totally destroyed every playoff opponent to win in Class A, while in 2A Eclectic claimed two narrow wins in the final two rounds to win the title. Eufaula gave up only 3 points in the four playoff games and roared to the 3A title, and the Jeff Davis Vols brought the 4A crown back to Montgomery by disposing of three Birmingham teams (and cross-town rival, Lanier). Congratulations to all the Champions!

Eufaula is not well-liked among many coaches, but the school has an outstanding athletic program. The Tigers won the state basketball crown last year, and now own the state football championship. A winning athletic program is combination of many things, and apparently Eufaula has found the right formula.

The South Alabama Conference released its All-Conference team last week and missing from the list was Elba's outstanding runner, Don Horstead! Don led the conference in rushing with 1567 yards, over 300 yards more than the second place runner, and scored 19 touchdowns to total 114 points. In my opinion, Horstead was without a doubt the top offensive player in the conference, and not being named All-

The team is voted on by the coaches and they are supposed to vote for the best players, However, it has become a popularity contest, not among players, but among coaches. The coaches don't vote for players who play for certain coaches(!) and hope this shows the coach how they feel. Well, if the coaches can't settle their differences, they need to just abolish the All-Conference team, because for the past several years many deserving players have been
